Instructor

David “Hunter” Levan received Bachelor’s and Master’s degrees magna cum laude in electrical engineering.

He is well known for his knowledge of system safety, which dates back to 1988, and software safety, which dates back to 1986. His experience spans the safety-critical sectors of defense, aviation, rail (light, heavy and high speed), nuclear power generation, and medical devices.

Hunter has received numerous commendations, been interviewed by newspaper reporters, and has appeared on television.

He has been teaching courses in safety since 1992. Standing ovations are not unusual.

He is known for his key note speaking engagements and continues to receive invitations from organizations and interest groups to participate in conferences and to sit on technical committees.

Registration & Seating

Complete your registration form and e-mail it to us.

Class size is limited for two reasons: (i) for the benefit of the attendees, and (ii) due to the table space required for each attendee to accommodate a computer, printer, and work space.

Registration Confirmation

You will receive confirmation of your registration when payment is received.

Cost

Course tuition is $2,050 U.S. per attendee. 15% discount applicable in the case of 3 or more attendees.

The course fee includes:

- use of leased computer equipment,*
- use of FTA software,
- instructor presentation,
- course notes,
- hand-outs,
- class exercises,
- morning refreshments & snacks,
- afternoon refreshments & snacks, and
- certificate.

*This is a major contributor to the course cost coupled with the cost of transporting the equipment, set-up and take-down each day, software installation, and testing.
